Senate Takes Up Cotton Allotment

By GORDON BROWN

WASHINGTON (UP) — The Senate tackled the problem of fixing the country's 1954 cotton acreage allotment.

Before it was a bill by its Agriculture Committee setting at 21,379,000 acres the area which cotton farmers of the country could plant this year under production controls.

Passage by the Senate would send the bill to a House Senate Conference Committee. The House passed a different version last summer.

In the House, southerners have organized to oppose the Senate bill. Their strategy is to get a measure more to their liking, either in conference or in the House.

Southerners feel the Senate bill gives advantages to the west but the bill has been characterized none to the south.

By Chairman (Aiken) (R-Vt) of the Senate Agriculture Committee as one which won't reduce the country's cotton surplus but which probably won't add to it either.

Controls were called for this year by Secretary of Agriculture Benson in view of a big cotton surplus. Under law he set the allotment at 17,910,000 acres, compared with more than 27 million acres planted in 1952 and more than 25 million in 1953. However, he did that to reduce hardships to many growers who would be forced to take huge cuts in their cotton acreages congress should like this to about 21 million acres.

Under the bill, no state, of the 20 cotton growing states affected, would be cut more than six per cent of its 1952 planted acreage.

In general the measure follows Bureau Federation.

Southerners are irate because proposals of the American Farm measure, under the 34 per cent reduction provision automatically would add some 59,000 acres to California and Arizona.

Under the Senate committee bill state allotments would include:

Arkansas 1,847,036; Louisiana 750,438; Mississippi 2,079,833; Missouri 426,617; Oklahoma 1,058,283; Tennessee 680,983; and Texas 8,719,178.

than 4,000 population in the state. Chief Justice Griffin Smith and Associate Justices J. S. Holt and Minor Millwee joined the McFadden in the majority opinion.

In a brief dissent, Associate Justice George Rose Smith wrote that "the majority seems to overlook the fact" that the disputed act "created not a county school but a state institution."

He said each new state institution must be located somewhere, and added that, "There is nothing in the Constitution to prevent the Legislature from making that determination."

He was joined by Associate Justices Paul Ward and Sam Robinson.

The case was decided in a suit brought by former State Sen. Richard R. Thompson of Eureka Spring Springs.

The Supreme Court awarded 290 shares of common stock in Dyke Associates, Inc., a management corporation for the extensive Dyke brothers interests, to Herbert L. Jett of Little Rock, a former executive of the corporation.

A ruling of Pulaski Chancellor Rodney Parham was reversed. Jett testified that the shares, worth $28,000 were given to him in August of 1951.

Nathaniel Dyke Jr., the guiding hand in Dyke Associates, said the stock was meant to be held in trust for the corporation.

Circuit Judge Elmo Taylor was directed by the Supreme Court to make another ruling on whether a new trial should be granted in a Phillips County insurance case.

In denying the motion for a new trial in Phillips County, Taylor said it was his policy not to place his judgment against the judgment of the jury as "to where the preponderance of the evidence lies."

The Supreme Court disagreed with Taylor and that if the jury decision runs clearly counter to the preponderance of evidence the judge should grant a new trial.

The new trial was refused in a consolidated case of James Bockman against the World Insurance Co., and Bockman against the Mutual Benefit, Health, and Accident Insurance Co.

Bockman, the loser in the lower court, appealed to the Supreme Court.

Prisoner Captured Following Break

RUSSELLVILLE (UP) — A prisoner was back in Pope County jail today after about an hour's freedom yesterday.

State Trooper John Scott said he captured Frank Wells about an hour after Wells escaped from the jail here.

After making the break, Wells hitchhiked a ride in a truck but jumped from the truck and headed into the woods when he saw Trooper Scott pull alongside.

Scott said he chased Wells into the woods and the prisoner surrendered after the trooper fired one shot over his head.

Old Charles Keeps on Fighting

By JACK HAND

NEW YORK — While Al Weill tries to "make up his mind about a winter title defense by heavyweight Champ Rocky Marciano, Ezzard Charles keeps on fighting.

The ex-champ from Cincinnati a recent winner over Coley Wallace at San Francisco, mixes with Bob Satterfi at Chicago Stadium Wednesday (CBS-TV).

The "new" Charles, a chance-taking fighter, can't afford to let Satterfield get a clean swing at his jaw. The unpredictable Chicago heavy can flatten a man with one punch.

Sandy Sallder the feather weight king who is home on leave from the Army in Germany bosses for the first time since March 17, 1952, when he goes against Billy Bossio of Hartsdale, N. Y., Friday at St. Nicholas Arena (ABC-radio, NBC-TV) in a non-title bout.

Fight fans will watch Sandler's weight with interest for there has been speculation that he might not be able to make the 12-pound feather limit. He expects to come in at 130 for the over-the-weight match.

Carmen Basilio may never win the world welter title but he must be the champion of the Saturday night fights (ABC-TV). The Canastota, N. Y., welter will be making his seventh appearance on Ray Arcel's series Saturday at Miami against Italo Scorticchini of Italy.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By GAYLE TALBOT

NEW YORK (UP) — The more one studies major league attendance figures for last season the more incredible it seems that the players should have chosen 1953 of all years to hire themselves a lawyer and started telling their employers in the financial solar plexus.

Considering the kind of beating most of them took at the box office, there is no great wonder that the magnates reacted like wounded grizzlies at the demand for increased pensions and threatened to throw the entire plan out the nearest window. The players are under the impression the owners were bluffing, but they are liable to wake up feeling like the man who insisted upon seeing a full house.

Make no mistake — big league baseball is a sick boy, and something must be done soon to get the fans started back through the turnstiles. If the present player salary scale is to be maintained there may well be some bitter and prolonged debates about pay between now and spring training.

Though baseball books are not made public, it has been announced semi-official that 12 of the 18 clubs lost money last season. Milwaukee and Brooklyn in the National and the Yankees in the American are known to have finished in the black. The fourth member of the fortunate group would have to be a guess, but it could have been Cleveland even though the Indians drew 375,431 fewer fans in 1952.

Total attendance in the American League fell off 1,329,820 Philadelphia showed a decline of 261,163. St. Louis 221,558 Detroit 142,800 Washington 103,863, New York 91,544, Boston 9,517, Chicago 40,322. One club, St. Louis, went under. Another, Philadelphia has cut its payroll drastically by disposing of two high-salaried players and an expensive manager.

The National League showed an over-all attendance increase of 1,080,573, but the figure is very deceiving. It was made possible only because Milwaukee went hog wild over its new club and set a new league record of 1,826,397 paid. The same team had drawn only 218,272 the previous year at Boston.

Thus the one club showed and increase of 1,545,119, and a little additional figuring indicates that the league as a whole would have dropped off by 464,546 admissions but for its beautiful new baby member. Two other teams showed modest increases — flag-winning Brooklyn 74,715 and Philadelphia 98,227 — but the remaining five took a ducking, and it is to be assumed they are not happy about it.

There were no major changes in the NBA ratings announced yesterday. The biggest gain was recorded by Rocky Castellani, the Pennsylvanian now fighting out of Ohio, who moved up from sixth to second among the world's middleweights.

The NBA recommended that Castellani get the next crack at the title won last fall by Carl (Bobo) Olson of Hawaii.

Randy Turpin, who lost to Olson in the windup of a round-robin series to select a successor to the retired Sugar Ray Robinson, was rated just behind Castellani. Both were listed as logical contenders.

Kild Gavilan, the welterweight champ, has said he, too, wants to get a shot at Olson's championship.

NBA President Andrew G. Putka said that if Gavilan were to fight Olson and beat him, he would surrender his welterweight championship "we feel Gavilan should first lose, he would continue as the titlist of the lower weight division."

"In the meantime,"

drum beats He's seen other snows in other towns in other years before, and wants a place out of the wind's way.

But in Times Square, the river of light where no neon sign is ever lonely, the snow tousles a girl's head that should be ruffled, and a hand rubs in the snow there and thaws it, and laughter rings in two hearts and knits them against a time when snowfalls are forgotten and the miserable ice form.

Snow slows the pace of New York. It puts a shovel and a job in the hand that needs help. It lifts people out of themselves. It sees them into unity.

Like mischief-minded elves they like to see the snow tie up their city. Knot it in mass traffic jams. Wrap it into a hopeless, happy jumble. And maybe stay that way until the first robin arrives and rescues the city by bending down and with one peck of his beak unties the bow that holds it all in one.

Well, maybe I do make too much of it. But this is the first real snowfall we have had this year, and snow does excite us here in the world capital of concrete just as the rain does when it is allowed, come spring.

Tell me, truly, wouldn't you like to go ice skating in Wall Street? Why not now? The perfect time. With the wind blowing, the snow falling and the broken bricks lying on the sidewalks, wouldn't you like to go ice skating in Wall Street? Why not now?

ing, well, maybe it is snowing in your town now. And you feel in your heart at this moment you wouldn't want to be anywhere else in the world.

To catch a snowflake is to seize a falling star and feel a coolness in your hand. And wherever you live, and whatever time you live in, that is how it should be.

Highland Oil Co., and chairman of the board of Atlas Processing Co., of Shreveport.

Justin R. Querbes, Sr., Shreveport insurance man and bank director.

Randolph Querbes, Justin's brother and president of Interstate Electric Corp.

Louis R. Schexnaydre United Gas Co., co-pilot.

The mallard was one of two planes returning a party of businessmen from a duck hunt in Southern Louisiana.

The other plane, a twin-engine Lockheed landed safely at greater Shreveport International Airport, destination of both the United States Aircraft, about 30 minutes before the amphibian crashed.

Five men, including N. C. McGowan, president of United Gas, were aboard the Lockheed.

The amphibian crashed shortly after Huddleston radioed the Shreveport airport tower that the plane was icing badly.

Ivey Pool, night manager of the airport, said the pilot told the tower he would try to make an emergency landing on the lake, but added:

"I don't think we can make it." Three witnesses Harold Martinez, Julian F. Martinez and E.C. Crain said they saw the plane come in very low, waver, hit some trees and crash.

The amphibian burst into flames after it hit the shack, located in a fishing camp area owned by W. R. Jacobs, a foreman for the Caddo Parish (County) Highway Department.

Mrs. J. T. Ledford said a boat shed owned by her husband burned. She said she heard the plane coming in low, then a noise that sounded "like a huge exhaust back fire." She said she ran to the scene, about 150 yards from her house.

"I saw several five-gallon cans of ducks and ammunition begin exploding," she said. "The plane had cut a swath through the trees and one wing had dug into a drainage ditch and the craft had flipped into a frame structure on the lake." The structure—the cabin—

Rubirosa Is Considered Best Dressed

NEW ORK (UP) — Porfirio Rubirosa nosed out President Eisenhower today as the best dressed man in America, although his wedding attire failed to live up to "the decided trend for sacrifice comfort for a dress-up look."

In issuing its annual list of the nation's spiffiest male dressers, the custom tailor's guild apologetically admitted that the Dominican Don Juan received a higher individual score from its members than Mr. Eisenhower, who ran a close second.

Fred Ballenta New York tailor and chairman of the guild, said he believed this was due "only to the fact that Mr. Rubirosa has suddenly been thrust into the 'lime light' by his marriage to Barbara Hutton. Otherwise, Ballenta said, the President "would have been the leader."

The guild listed Rubirosa as its representative of society on its list and the President as its selection from public life. Other listees were Bob Hope of television and radio; Don E. Ahrens, general manager of General Motors' Cadillac division for industry.

Bobcats Take Malvern, HSTC Tournament

The Hope Bobcats won the Henderson State Teachers College's annual invitational basketball tournament at Arkadelphia last Saturday night defeating Malvern 53-48 in a hotly-contested final. This was the second straight tournament and 8th straight win for Hope.

Sonny Griffin chalked up 18 points for high scoring honors and Carmie Hatch again came through in the clutch and scoring 15 points. Bob Westerman contributed 17 points for the Leopards.

The game was tight all the way and the greatest margin was enjoyed by the Bobcats in the final when they held a 10 point lead.

Hope took a two point lead in the first quarter after the game was tied some four times. 11-9. Then the Cats outscored the Leopards 13-12, in the second quarter to take a 24-21 halftime lead.

Hope outscored the Leopards by only one point in the last two periods, 14-13 and 15-14.

The last time Malvern came close was in the third period when they tied the count at 31-all. Then Griffin, Halbert Mitchell and Stanley shot to put the Bobcats ahead for good.

The Bobcats really put up a defensive show as they held Malvern's big Center Ken York, who had been averaging nearly 25 points a game, to only two field goals in the entire game.

In the Semi-finals played on Saturday morning Bobcats stopped the England Lions 47 to 40 in a hectic finish.

Hope got off too a 9-5 first quarter lead and increased it to 25 to 10 at halftime.

The third quarter saw the Bobcats coast to a 33-19 lead and then almost saw the Lions beat them out in a rip-roaring finish. England got within two points of the Cats in the final minutes.

Carmie Hatch pulled Hope over the hump as he dropped in nine points in the final quarter to bring his total to 21 points. Johnny Capps of England erred in sinking a field goal into the Hope basket in the third quarter when the Bobcats trailed only six points on their own.

Dark Star's Derby Upset Called Best

By JOHN CHANDLER

NEW YORK (U) — It was late in the afternoon at rambling old Churchill Downs last May 2 and more than 100,000 persons had been milling around for hours waiting to see a "sure thing" become the first grey horse in history win the Kentucky Derby.

At 4:32 p. m. that sunny day, 11 of the nation's best 3-year-olds slammed out of the starting gate with a tough mile and one quarter run ahead of them, and a $90,050 prize for the winner.

Native Dancer, never beaten in his brilliant career, just had to win at odds of 70 cents on the dollar.

But a flat little colt named Dark Star, almost 25 to 1 on the tote board, jumped into the lead almost at once, and then stayed there to the end as he beat off the closing spurt of the touted Dancer to win by a head.

Dark Star, with Henry Moreno in the saddle, had pulled off one of the greatest upsets in the history of racing.

This was voted the sports upset of 1933 today in the 23rd annual year-end Associated Press poll.

In a nationwide poll of sports writers and sportscasters, the defeat of Alfred Vanderbilt's grey galloper received 41 first place votes of the 128 cast in a close ballot battle with Purdue's 6-0 up-

New Baseball Loop Includes Magnolia

DALLAS, (U) — A six-club baseball league, including Magnolia, Ark., was organized here yesterday.

The new loop, a Class C organization, will be known as the Oil States League. Other teams in the league will be Wichita Falls, Paris, Sherman, Longview, and Greenville, Tex.

Howard Green of Fort Worth, organizer and president of the league, said Texarkana and Marshall, Tex., may join later to make an eight-team circuit.

The league plans a 142-game schedule, beginning April 20 and ending Sept. 6.

Frosty Candidate for New Job

TOLEDO (U) — Forrest (Frosty) England of Arkansas State College is one of four candidates still under consideration for the head football coaching job at the University of Toledo.

The university cut the list Saturday and announced that, in addition to England, the remaining candidates are Jack Mollenkopf, line coach at Purdue; Bill Orwig, end coach at Michigan; and Bob Brownson, Portsmouth, Ohio, High School coach.

England has coached Arkansas State's Indians to four bowl games in three seasons. His team tied East Texas State in the Tangerine Bowl this past New Year's.

Porkers Try Again Tonight at Baylor

DALLAS (U) — The Southwest Conference basketball race was thrown into a jumble last week when Southern Methodist shattered the record of only undefeated team in the loop — Rice — with a 79-66 victory.

That victory plus an earlier 84-60 triumph over Baylor left the Mustangs in a tie with Texas for first place. The Owls and Baylor are jockeying for third place while Texas Christian and Arkansas are still very much in the running after only a week of play.

Texas A&M, in the cellar spot with two defeats, has just about given up hopes of retaining its title.

In other games last week Baylor defeated A&M 47-45; Rice rebounded for its loss to SMU with a 78-53 triumph over the Aggies; Texas defeated Texas Christian 54-47 and Arkansas 64-61.

The Porkers captured the only non-conference game of the week in an 89-76 triumph over Mississippi A furious second half rally by

Rookie May Be Bounced for Betting

Port Wayne Ind. (U) — Jack Molinas, who had a good chance of being named the National Basketball Association Rookie of the year instead appeared likely to be the first player expelled from the league for betting on NBA games.

The Port Wayne Piston forward and former Columbia University star, was in the position of trading his career and a salary of $9,600

Arkansas fell short at Austin Saturday night. The Razorbacks, after trailing all the way — once by 13 points, chopped the Texas margin to a single point in the final quarter but ran out of gas.

Arkansas' Norman Smith led the individual scorers with 24 points. He hit 10 of 15 field goal attempts. Billy Powell was high for the Longhorns with 19.

Texas' tremendous height advantage was the difference. The towering Steers beat the Razorbacks on rebounds 41-31.

The Rice Owls — first choice to take the loop crown — have lost only one game in 12 starts. Mainstay for Rice is Gene Schiwyer, leading conference scorer with 305 points.

a season for about $400 in gambling profits.

The NBA, which escaped being involved directly in the college basketball bribery scandals of the last three seasons, yesterday suspended him indefinitely.

President Maurice Podoloff left little doubt that the 6-foot-6 Molinas is finished in pro basketball. The 21-year-old player is entitled to a hearing before being expelled automatically at the end of the season. But Podoloff said he doubted that Molinas will ask for cne.

The tall youth told The Associated Press he had bet only on his team to win.

"I've never done anything dishonest in my life," he exclaimed, almost in tears.

Podoloff said in New York that Molinas offered to play without pay if the league would give him a chance to redeem himself. The NBA president turned him down.

Several hours after Molinas' suspension, Deputy Chief Inspector Edward W. Byrnes in New York said that a Bronx candy store operator had been questioned in connection with the incident.

Byrnes, in charge of Bronx detectives, identified the man as Isidore Ratenski, about 54. Byrnes said the man had been released after being questioned for 1 1/2 hours but he was told to report for further questioning today.

New York newspapers last night reported that bookmakers had stopped taking bets on Fort Wayne games after the Pistons' game with Boston Dec. 18. Odds favoring Boston jumped sharply just before the game, it was reported. Boston won 82-75, with Molinas scoring 20 points, 18 of them in the first half.

Englishman Is Star But Voice Is by Lanza

By BE HOMAS

HOLLYWOOD (U)—A handsome young Englishman opened his mouth to sing. The voice was unmistakably that of Mario Lanza.

This strange circumstance has been happening on the set of "Student Prince," MGM's re-orientation of the Sigmund Romberg operetta. I watched while Edmund Purdom sang a love song to Ann Blythe. At least Purdom went through the motions. Lanza supplied the voice.

This is the picture that launched Lanza's singing career. He is handsome, tall, with a well-defined face and brown hair. Director Richard Thorpe reported he was doing admirably.

After the first 15 seconds on the screen you'll forget entirely that you are hearing Lanza's voice," said Thorpe.

When the scene was over, Purdom came over to discuss his future. He believes that the illusion will succeed.

"It's not like Larry Parks' impersonation of Al Jolson," said the handsome protegee of the Oliviers. In that picture, Parks was portraying a well-known personality. All his songs were done with gestures and dances, just as they would have been done on a stage before an audience.

"Student Prince is different. The fellow does not step before an audience and start singing; all the songs are worked into the plot. Lanza had never done that on the screen. Virtually all the singing in his pictures were arias or songs delivered in the grand style. Only in the beginning of 'The Great Caruso' was there a song which he did spontaneously.

Purdom has never met Lanza, but is well acquainted with his style. When the young actor was selected for the part, he ran the Lanza pictures over and over to observe how the tenor delivered his songs.

"Oddly enough, Mario exerts a little when he is singing on the screen," he commented. "His pictures were taken while he was singing for the recordings, he would probably be amazed at the training he does."

"I was faced with a problem in trying to stimulate his singing. It is such a big voice with such a kick to it that you have to do one of two things: you have to appear big with a huge, padded chest, or you have to appear to be straining every muscle. Synchronizing the lip movement was easy to acquire; making the delivery of the songs seem authentic was much more difficult.

"I do it best by turning the recording up as loud as I can. In that way I can crown out my own ineffective organ. And the voice almost seems to enter into me."

That's the system that Parks used for the Jolson pictures; he played the songs at a deafening volume.

Despite Purdom's modesty, he is reported to have a nice voice of his own. He's baritone, but director Thorpe reported that he becomes a tenor when he has to strain in the closeups.

Purdom is the son of English author and dramatic critic, Charles B. Purdom. Having appeared in repertory and in Shakespeare at Stratford-on-Avon, he came to New York to play in the "Cleveland" shows done by Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier. Six different studios offered him contracts and he chose one at MGM.

His only two film chores before "Student Prince" were bits in "Titanic" and "Julius Caesar." He married an English dancer named Anita Phillips and they have a year-old daughter.

Those Pills Didn't Fill Him Up

BURGANK, Calif. (U)—Jimmy Resch, 2, gleefully held up an empty bottle of nitroglycerine pills. "Look, Mommie," he said. "All gone."

The frantic mother, Mrs. Marie Resch, at once told the manager of the theater they were attending that her son had taken the medicine bottle from her purse. An ambulance was summoned and Jimmie was whisked away to a hospital, where a stomach pump was applied. Jimmie's reaction: "Mommie, I'm still hungry."

Secrecy Need Impressed by Eisenhower

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON "No spikka da English."

That was all Sen. Millikin of Colorado would say to the other congressional leaders in the White House conference with President Eisenhower.

It was a long speech when compared with the statements of some of the other congressional leaders who had nothing more to say of their talk with Eisenhower than "Harummmph" and "Hummum."

For three days several weeks ago the President had them in to discuss the program he starts unveiling for Congress tomorrow. They emerged like men who had taken vows of silence, which they probably did.

Yesterday Eisenhower sat down in his office with the Democratic leaders to talk over his defense and foreign programs, but when they trooped out their lips were pretty well buttoned too.

This might be astonishing in the case of men who in other times and places could talk at the touch of a pencil on paper, except that (1) it isn't really new and (2) it won't last.

Right after taking office in 1953 Eisenhower asked his Republican leaders to drop in at the White House to confer with him on problems.

The most important of them, like the late Sen. Taft and House speaker Martin, were willing to tell newsmen when they left the President the subject of their discussion but usually not what was said.

This time it seems the congressional visitors agreed to be even less talkative than that. Eisenhower's press secretary, James C. Hagerty, had a written statement for newsmen after each day's session.

Hagerty explained briefly what was talked about, like taxes or social security, but never a word on what was said to whom and what he said back in approval or disagreement.

But once Eisenhower read his State of the Union message, to Congress tomorrow all signals are off. The agreed-upon silence was to give him a chance to disclose his program publicly before it was discussed privately.

And the session of Congress which opens today will certainly be remembered for the amount of discussion if not for the amount or quality of the legislation.

When Eisenhower asked the Democrats to see him it could be considered a friendly bid for bipartisanship which is something Eisenhower will need before this session ends if he is to put over his program.

Since not all his own Republicans share all his ideas, it can be taken for granted some "Harummmph" and "Hummum" once his

Tea At Hesterly Home
Fates Mrs. Charles A. Hesterly

The home of Mrs. J. B. Hesterly was decorated in a pink and blue color scheme on Wednesday afternoon for the tea she gave to meet her daughter-in-law Mrs. Charles A. Hesterly a recent bride.

Mrs. Wren Scott and Mrs. Otha Stevenson greeted guests at the door, after which they were received by the hostess, the honoree and her aunt, Mrs. H. B. De Lamar.

Mrs. J. B. Hesterly wore a gay blue tulle afternoon dress with matching satin shoes. Her corsage was of white gardenias. Mrs. Charles A. Hesterly was dressed in her wedding gown, a floor length model of Skinnars satin and nylon Chantilly lace with fitted bodice, Chantilly lace yoke and long pointed sleeves.

The scalloped satin skirt fell over a hoop of nylon Chantilly lace. Her shoes were white satin and she wore a bandeau of pink carnations in her hair. Mrs. De Lamar chose an afternoon frock of black crepe and her corsage was of white gardenias.

Mrs. Ernest Hesterly and Mrs. E. M. Sharp assisted with the guests in the living room. A table crystal vase holding pink roses was placed on a table. The coffee message is delivered, and not in approval.

Any defection from the Republican ranks in a Congress where the parties are so evenly divided will make it all that more urgent for Eisenhower to have Democratic support on his major proposals.

This being an election year, it is hardly likely the Democrats at yesterday's session would make blanket promises of support or that Eisenhower would ask them to.

By the time this session is two months old all of Eisenhower's gestures of good will may have counted for nothing and been forgotten because of what may happen in Congress itself between now and then.

Walking to the house for dinner, Phil tilted his head inquiringly toward the white clapboard cottage. "Who lives there?"

Dale looked straight ahead. "No one."

"I thought I saw a ghost creeping around the rosebushes."

She whirled around, nostrils flaring, facing him on the narrow path. "You know very well that I lived there with Kelly!"

"Yes, your grandmother told me." His voice was flat. "She also said you hadn't been inside the house since his death. Why, Dale? Scared—or just being dramatic?"

She walked on quickly, her head high. "It is none of your business."

"All right," he agreed. "We won't talk about it. But I can't figure you out. Some challenges you meet head-on, others you run from like crazy. It's just a house, after all."

She was ahead of him on the path, hurrying. Overgrown raspberry canes scratched her legs. "Don't bother trying to figure me out," she said. "Just let me alone."

"How can I, if I'm going to be your young man?"

"You're not," she said shortly. At dinner, Grandy commented on Dale's quietness.

"She's mad at me," Phil said cheerfully, lowering his eyelids. "She's sulking."

Grandmother looked surprised and solicitous. "Dale never sulks."

"Of course I don't!" Dale said firmly. "Tch-tch," clucked Phil. "Temper!"

Dale laughed. Phil the featherweight, Phil the Darby to any Joan, Phil the fool. It was not possible to take him seriously, or to remain angry with him. Why let his remarks disturb her?

After dinner, they played Grandy's favorite martial recordings on the radio-phonograph.

"The Army," Grandy remarked, tapping a brisk toe to the beat, "is recruiting muscians. I heard over the radio. They're asking specifically for bagpipers."

Dale winked at Grandmother and said to Phil, "Grandy puts the bagpipes in the same category as the piano and the violin. In terms of artistry, he says a real good bagpiper has at least the stature of a Rubinstein or a Heifetz. Just lump the bagpipe with the harp, the monica or the kazoo, and see how defensive Grandy becomes!"

"Do you play the pipes, sir?" Phil asked.

"That I do! Want I should play 'em for you?" He looked over at Dale triumphantly. "In the closet, Dale. Under my raincoat."

Dale grinned at Phil. "You asked for it, my boy, with that tone of respect!"

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

IT WAS sheer joy for Dale to drive her car over the familiar roads again, to stop and chat with Joe Gillespie at his service station, with Joshua Wragge in the general store, and the portly Reverend Spencer pulling weeds in his carrot bed. "Where," he said, "I always compose my best sermons. Everyone was unforgivably glad to see her—with the exception of Armorel Crosland. On the day she stopped her green convertible at the house on the hilltop, Dale saw Armorel, a shadowy figure behind the low fence, reluctantly uprooting a tangle of hollyhocks.

"Armorel!" Dale called out, her voice friendly in greeting. But the gray-haired woman did not look up as Dale got out of the car and slammed the door. She picked her way gingerly along a pathway overgrown with Queen Anne's lace and plants and ragged, dusty grasses. A Scotch thistle scratched her ankle, leaving a circle of thorn red on her skin. Dale stifled exasperation as she went through a second gate, which swung reluctantly on unrolled hinges under her hand.

Armorel turned at last, straightening slowly. Small drops of perspiration ridged her upper lip; her sallow skin flushed. She ran her green-stained palms absently down the tips of her faded dress, and gradually, as she looked at Dale, her eyes focused. "Why did you come back?" she asked abruptly. Her voice was brittle, her arm akimbo in resentment.

Dale felt her smile fade; her heart was beating like a metronome.

Armorel took a step toward her. "You won't find Kelly here," she said, in a low, intense voice. "Is that why you came back? Because you won't do you any good. Kelly's gone."

Dale reached behind her for the goldiness of a great elm's trunk. "Armorel," she said sharply, "what's wrong? You are ill."

Armorel shook her head in slow, assured negation. "I am perfectly well, thank you. Perfectly well. The hollyhocks multiply so rapidly, don't they? I am pulling them all down. They're taking themselves."

Aggie dropped into her tone. "If Aggie stopped going to seed, they would stand still, wouldn't they?"

Dale pressed her palms hard against the rough bark. She was afraid, but beneath her fear was an aching compassion for something she did not entirely understand. "Time never stands still," she said gently.

"But it does," she moved closer and closer and put her hand on Dale's arm. "Time never stands still."

Dale reached for her hand. "Time never stands still," she said gently.
